Refuges from Iraq, Anna's family emigrated to the US when she was 13 and although heavily Americanized, she still retains some of her family's strict moral values.

Raised in Deerborn, Michigan, Anna's parents worked endless hours at multiple jobs, leaving her as the primary caregiver to her younger siblings. Her natural compassion and love of children lead her towards a career in medicine until she ultimately became a midwife at a hospital in Detroit.

Like all healthcare workers, she found her herself thrust onto the front lines of the pandemic but when the hosptial she worked at closed, she moved back to Deerborn to help her family and their community as best she could. Quickly overwhelmed by the distmper, she realized her skills were uselss in the face of this level of death.

Now, having lost everything to the Dog Flu, Anna she has become much harder and determined, and she makes an effort to n compassion for those around her in difficult times.
